Biography

Samara Ash is a Miami-based public artist known for large-scale, site-specific works that merge environmental storytelling, symbolism, and realism. Her practice explores the relationship between nature, time, and human experience, creating immersive compositions that reflect the identity and ecology of each location.

Ash has completed major public art commissions across the United States and internationally, collaborating with municipalities, cultural institutions, and private developers. With over two decades of experience, she brings a multidisciplinary approach that integrates muralism, sculptural elements, and durable materials suited for long-term public environments.

Her work is rooted in narrative and place, transforming public spaces into visually compelling landmarks that foster connection, awareness, and civic pride.
